

Mirallmar mirror

"Seven Mirrors randomly deployed on a zig-zagging spine configure the object. The seven faces are a through, an intuition, and as such, something never definitive, always unfinished. In order to be able to define themselves, they need a place to reflect and thus to inhabit. In contrast, at the spine everything is terminated. There, everything is definitive and conclusive. Intentionally, a part of this spine is left exposed to view in order to give a few clues as to the laws governing its construction."

Mirror composed of 7 different square two-sided mirrors of different sizes, with variable position. The mirrors are plane with exception of the one marked H, which is concave. Structure, ferrules and discs in zinc-plated iron.
